

Haiti earthquake response

Children will receive Super Bowl apparel

Dear Friend,

Have you wondered what will happen to the Colts Super Bowl Championship apparel? Well, I have good news, it won't go to waste. With your help, children in Haiti will receive the donated Super Bowl game-day apparel bearing the Colts championship logo.

"For years, World Vision has helped us to ensure that no NFL apparel goes to waste," said David Krichavsky, NFL director of community relations. "With the enormous needs in Haiti and World Vision's long-term presence there, we know that these goods will go to very good use."

Your gift today will help ship and deliver this clothing to the people who need it most, and give them a renewed sense of normalcy and dignity. Because corporate partners donate the clothing, your gift multiplies 15 times in value to deliver new pants, sturdy shoes, protective jackets, and more to children and families in Haiti and 31 other countries around the world.

Children in Haiti still need our help. Please continue to join us in prayer and support for children and families as they rebuild their lives.

God bless you,

Rich Stearns
President, World Vision U.S.

P.S. Please give today and help bring joy to a child's life with the gift of new clothing. Remember, your gift will multiply 15 times!

Children in Nicaragua were happy to receive shirts and hats with the Patriots championship logo in 2008. Last year, Cardinals apparel was distributed to children in El Salvador. You can help World Vision provide children in Haiti and 31 other countries with new clothing. Your gift will multiply 15 times in impact.

Children in Haiti are still recovering in the aftermath of the earthquake. Kimberley, 9, is living in a park with other children and families. She receives food and education at a nearby school. World Vision is continuing to work to meet people's immediate needs and develop safe places for children to learn and play.
